More on Subject Headings

A subject heading is a specific word or phrase used to find and organise books and articles by topic. Subject headings can be a great way to easily find things related directly to your topic. Once you have identified a book or article that is worthwhile, look at the subject headings. In the online catalogue these are found in the catalog record and you can click directly on the subject heading to get a list of books on the same subject.

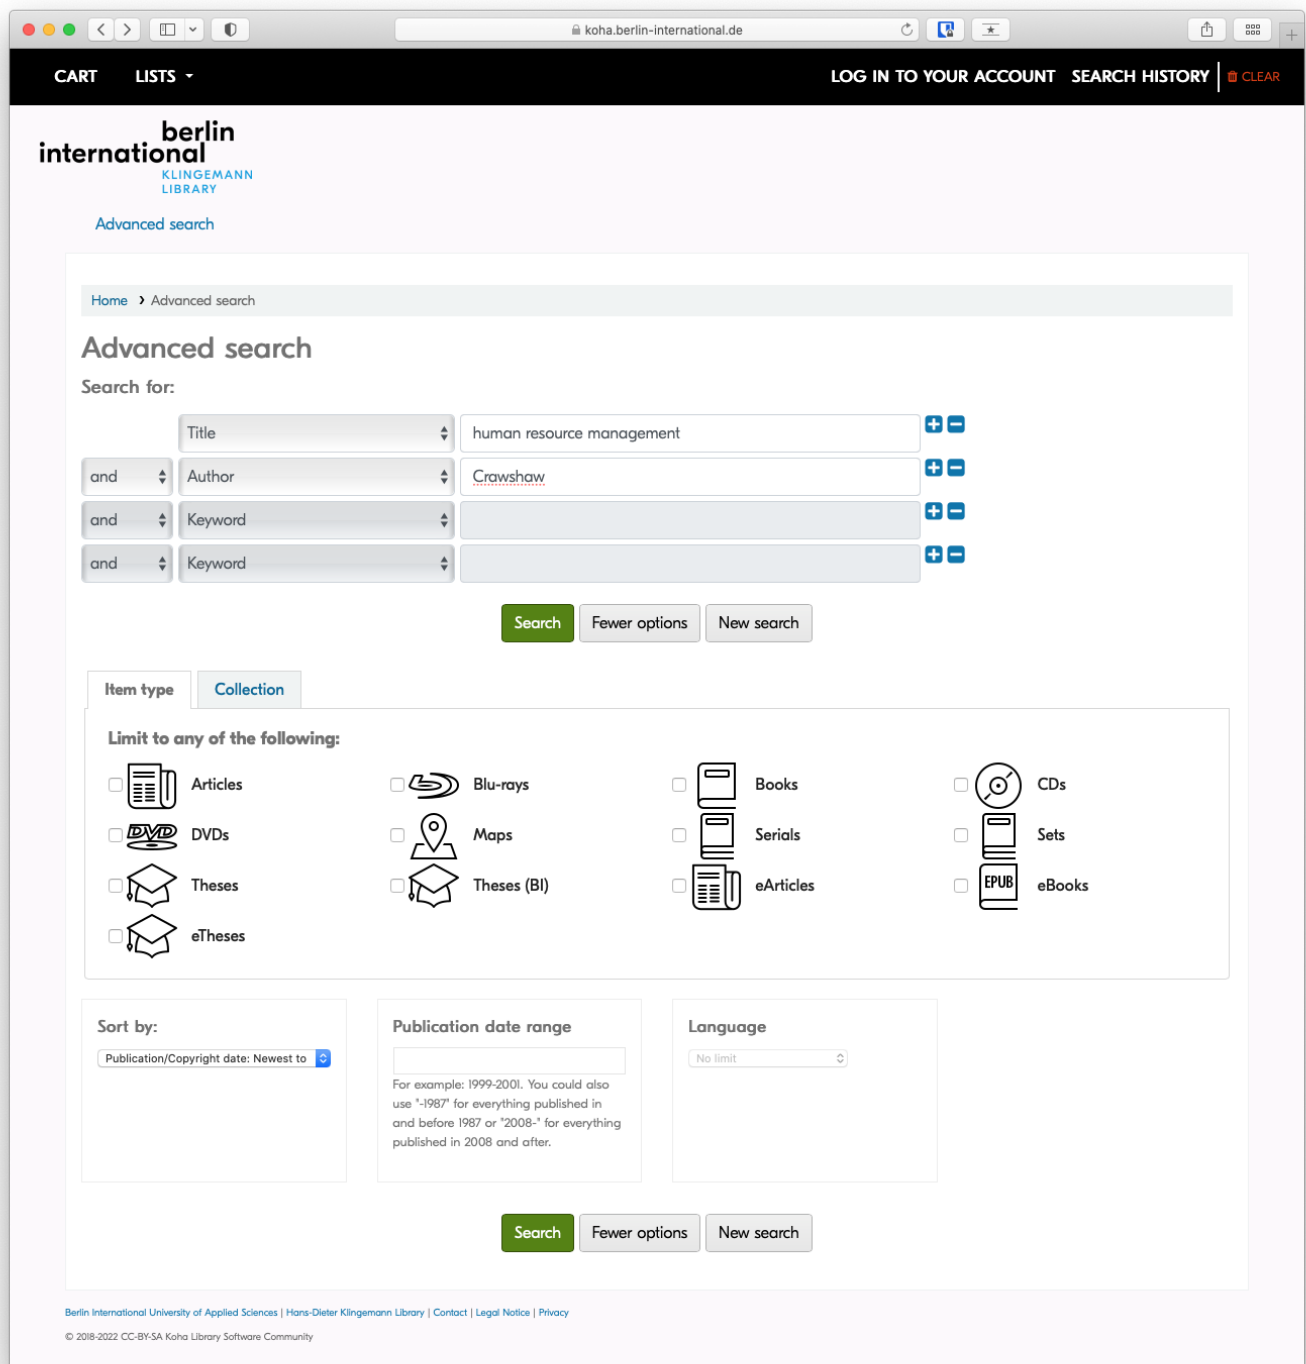

Subject headings are different from keywords in that they are specific terms assigned to a subject by a subject analyst or the author.

In the library catalogue and many databases, an item's subject(s) will be a link, so that you can click on the subject heading to find similar items. You also might want to note the exact words to search them as a keyword later.

Combine search fields

Sometimes searching in a specific field still returns too many results when you're looking for something specific. In those cases, it is helpful to combine two or more search fields using AND, OR, or NOT from the drop-down menus to the left of the search field.

Example: A title search for 'human resource management' may return dozens of results, but when combined with an author search, as in the screenshot below, only items with 'human resource management' in the title AND 'Crawshaw' as an author will be returned.

Results

Refine your search

Once your search has returned results, you can narrow those results, or refine your search based on varied criteria, eg author, availability, item type or topic.

By Availability

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying a library search results page. A callout bubble points to the 'Availability' filter in the left sidebar, which is currently set to 'Limit to currently available items'. The main content area shows three search results, each with a book icon, title, author, and availability information. The left sidebar contains various filters including Authors, Collections, Home libraries, Item types, Series, Places, and Topics.
